THE GLOBE AND MR. JOHN SHIELDS.

Mr. John Shields has, through his solicitors, asked the Globe to withdraw its charges in connection with Section B, and apologize or stand the consequences. Mr. Cameron, general manager of the Globe Printing Company, refuses to do this and says that "If any action is brought against the Globe it will be prepared to defend itself." It now remains to be seen whether Mr. Shields will or will not carry out his threat. Should he do so some interesting revelations may be expected.

THE DOMINION LICENSE BILL.

Apart altogether from the questions of jurisdiction and the conflict which its passage must bring about between the Dominion Government and that of Ontario, the new License Bill does not seem to meet the requirements of either the liquor sellers or the temperance people. A deputa- tion of those interested in the sale of liquor has been at Ottawa interviewing the Government with respect to changes desired by them. The worthy Patriarch of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of Ontario gives the Bill a most emphatic condemnation. The temperance people of Winnipeg have also protested against the Bill. It is hardly probable that any bill could be framed which would meet the approval of both the Licensed Victuallers and the temperance people, and the opposition with which the Bill is meeting is not to be wondered at, but we are unable to understand why the Government should have been so anxious to secure control of a traffic which cannot fail to give them a great deal of unnecessary opposition which cannot tend in any way to benefit them. Whatever doubts may exist in reference to the jurisdiction of the Provinces in this matter it is generally conceded that the intention of the framers of the British North American Act was to place this matter in the hands of the Provincial Governments, and we imagine that it would have been better for the Government to have taken steps to secure undoubted right for each province to legislate for itself on the liquor question.

INCORPORATION.

As the Lieutenant Governor will in all probability call the North West Council together almost immediately after the elections have taken place in the newly formed electoral districts, it would be well for those of our citizens who are interested in the question of Municipal Incorporation to take steps, either by petition or otherwise, to have the matter brought to that body. Prince Albert is not the only place in the Territories that will be likely to seek corporate powers. The various settlements in our immediate vicinity, Edmonton, Qu'Appell, Broadview and in all probability some of the rural settlements in other parts will be anxious to secure control of their own local affairs, it will therefore be of the utmost importance that every clause which it is desirable to have included in the ordinance forming municipalities should be clearly defined in order that the Council may be enabled to pass a general incorporation ordinance under which any body of settlers could at once be incorporated without undergoing the formality of securing a separate ordinance except in so far as a definition of the limits or other distinct conditions of each municipality might require. The conditions of the roads both in town and country, the drainage of the swamp to the south of the town, the appointment of street inspectors in town and of road superintendents or pathmasters, the placement of public urinals, the division of the district into school sections, the establishment of a board for the examination of teachers, the appointment of a competent Inspector or superintendent of schools for the district and other kindred topics are all matters of public importance and such as require some united action from our citizens as soon as possible. In connection with the above would it not also be well for some of our political friends to take a census of the adult population of the District of Lorne. An additional member may be elected in any electoral district whenever the adult population, exclusive of aliens and unfranchised Indians, numbers two thousand. We feel satisfied that this District contains that number, including non voters and women. The three newly constituted districts have not yet returned members and if action were taken at once we would still have time to elect another member before the meeting of the Council.

MUSIC ON THE WATERS.

They render have no doubt noticed in the papers that the Goodrich Transportation Company had secured a bond from Mayan to make mule runs on the route that line between Milwaukee and Chicago this summer. Well there is trouble hanging on in consequence. Mr. Harrison, of the Goodrich line, entrusted the organization of the band to Mr. Nick Jarvis, of Wausau, a gentleman whose reputation as a scientific ponderer of the bass drum has received encomiums from the crowned heads of Oshkosh and Haven's cheese factories.

Having such confidence in Mr. Jarvis, the Americans gave him a writing commission with authority to secure the best talent in the known world. He organized his band and then it occurred to Mr. Jarvis that the musicians had always been accustomed to playing on land, and they might be sick on the water, so he took measures to acclimate them to a seafaring life by leaving Waianae. He got them to practicing in a building and hired some boys to throw water up on the side of the house, to see if they would be seasick. The band fellows would have took the sea first rate, only the villains who had been hired to throw the water used a lot of dirty stuff they found back of a hotel, which smelled powerful.

A number of the band members felt the wash of the waves against the bulwarks of a house, and smelled what they supposed to be salt sea air, and they leaned out of the windows and wanted to throw up their situations, but a German in the party had a lemon and some cheese, which was given around to taste and smell, and they came out of it all right.

Mr. Jarvis' next idea, to accustom the prize sailors to the nasty deep, was to take them out on the mill pond at Wauwun in a skiff. They got out in the middle of the pond, and were playing a selection from the opera of "Solid Muldoon," when a boy who had slipped into the boat with a fishpole, got a bite from a ball head which caused the vessel to roll, and the utmost confusion prevailed. Ordering the entire drama played to "cut the main trolley," and delay the cornet, Mr. Jarvis took the bass drum between his teeth and jumped overboard, followed by the band, and they waded ashore.

On Monday last the band arrived in Milwaukee and reported on board the Goodrich steamer, in the river, ready for business. They were told to go as they pleased until evening, when they would be expected to play before the boat started, and also on the trip to Chicago. The men sat around on deck all the afternoon and sniffled of the river. It smelled different from any salt water they ever sniffed, and they wanted to go home.

At seven o'clock the boat pulled a few fathoms the boat lay in the river, and finally she let her ropes and steamers towards the lake, the band whopping up to the "Blue Danube." As the boat struck blue water, and her low raised on the water, she began to jump. The first corner player stopped to pour water on the horn, and lean against a post. If he was as pale as death, and the tubs player stopped to see what ailed the corner player, and to lean over the railing to see man down stairs. The hornists found something to do, and the tubs player and stopped playing and laid down a life belt, the alto became cold around the extremities and quite painful as went to the smoke stack to warm himself, the pilot began to perspire and quit playing and fanned himself with the cylinder, and all the players were so cold that all of them took the jump in ten minutes.

The Captain noticed that there was some discrepancy in the music and came on deck to see about it. Wading through the brass horns he came up to where the band had been, and found Nick Jarvis beating blazes out of the bass drum at Harvey Hill carving the blue Danube of the snare drum, and that was all the music there was. The Captain asked Jarvis what kind of a riot that was, and he told him it was the best they could order the circumstances.

Restoratives were applied to the members, and they braced up enough to stand in 'Rocked in the Cradle of the deep' but they couldn't play it through, owing to dyspepsia. The captain got them in the cabin to play for the young folks' dance, but the only thing they could play without getting sick was 'Home, Aye, from a Foreign Shore,' and the band decided to do it all. The horn blowers were out looking at the starlight, leaning on the railing, as the stars were reflected the water.

At Riquep it took some time to load, owing to rough water, and in the midst of it all a pale man, with a square chin on his nose, rolled up against the captain. It was Haive Hill. He held his hand over his mouth and in a voice choked with emotion and fried potatoes he said: "Captain, I am a poor man, but if you will land this boat and save me, I will give you nine dollars."

The captain decided to dispense with the music the rest of the night, and let the band get on its own legs.

At Chisholm, the next morning, Jarvis, who had put a little sick, too, tried to induce the captain to allow the band to walk back to Milwaukee on the shore, beside the boat. He said they could play any time that ever was played, on land, and the passengers could hear it just as well, if the boat kept alongside of the shore. The captain wouldn't let them off, and they have been kept on the boat all the week, so that now they are old sailors, and can play all right. But it was pretty tough the first night. Wauquan is organizing a reception for the band when it comes home.

GOOD NEWS.

Rev. W. H. Cooper, F.R.G.S., of London, Eng., is to pay Prince Albert a visit this summer. Mr. Cooper is visiting the North West on a special mission to the Saskatchewan, and is sent by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. Mr. Cooper will take notes of the country and its adaptability for settlements. Should he report favorably a tide of emigration from England will settle here next year. Mr. Clarke is in receipt of the following letter introducing this gentleman:—

SIR,—I have the honor by directions of His Excellency the Governor General, of introducing to you the Reverend W. H. Cooper, of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, London, England, who is visiting the North West Territories, with a view to furthering the interests of that Society. I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

THE DUDE.

The dude has struck this town at last. We knew he must come, but tried to save him off as long as possible. The dude is one of those creatures which are perfectly harmless, and are a necessary evil to civilization. He can be seen every afternoon sunning himself in the warm rays of a North West sun. Our poetical machine is a little out of order but we managed to grind the following out of it: He tries to live on his department. Though I do not wish to be rude. From a straw hat he draws inspiration. This is the dude charming long dude. His linen is of the finest. He sports five or six suits of clothes. But his tailor and washer woman's quarters. No one but his brother dude knows. It is murmured he's a ter an heiress. This is the dude charming long dude. But we think he has struck the wrong country. This is the dude on the make.

MANUFACTURING PLUGGERS FOR THE NORTHWEST.
"Preliminary arrangements are being made for the formation of a joint stock company for the manufacture of ploughs at Ayr on a very large scale especially for the North West territory. The company propose to act in conjunction with one of the largest American plow manufacturers. Their estimated capacity will be 25,000 ploughs per annum." Toronto Mail.

It is currently reported that the above mentioned joint stock company is to have John Watson for its president and will be composed of the principal members of the Watson Manufacturing Company, together with some of the leading citizens of Ayr. The Company after a careful investigation and a thorough test in their search for a superior plough have decided to manufacture the celebrated Buford plough so extensively used in this country by nearly all the leading farmers. One case which might be mentioned is that of the Bell Farming Company, on their mammoth farm near Qu'Appelle where they are used exclusively. It is said that Mr. Buford is interested in the organization, and that the factory will be under the direct supervision of experienced men from his shops in Rock Island. The citizens of Ayr may well congratulate themselves on having secured such a valuable enterprise in their midst, and from the character of the men who have it in charge no doubt it will prove a success and become one of the most extensive plough manufacturing on the continent. Jackson & Jackson are the agents in Prince Albert.

The letter in reference to the pasture in connection with the English Church to be erected on the Mission property, has been crowded out of this issue, but will appear next week.
